About our program

Change Em Ways (CEW) is an Indigenous Men's Behaviour Change Family Domestic Violence Program being delivered by Mens Outreach Service Aboriginal Corporation. CEW applies a holistic approach to increase the safety of families, reduce family violence and strengthen the social and emotional well-being of all those involved.

Who is it for?

Change Em Ways is for Aboriginal men who wish to stop using violence.

What can you expect?

A strength-based, trauma informed healing program. Includes intensive workshop group sessions with a cultural camp and regular cultural days throughout.

Following completion of the workshop the men receive a further 5 months' outreach support from the program team.

Strong Women Strong Families

The CEW Broome model includes the Strong Women, Strong Families Group Program (SWSF) a safe space for women to receive support and begin to heal from their trauma.

One on one support also provides an opportunity for partners to become familiar with the program content and expectations of the CEW program so they can support their men.

Feedback

"Going on cultural days its like taking out every stress from your body, getting the weight off your chest – just enjoying the day. It was really good – I loved it."

MALE PARTICIPANT

"It is a very worthwhile project for restoring relationships and rebuilding pride and self-worth in participants. I look forward to the Men's Outreach Teams returning to the community."

STAKEHOLDER

Client received a conditional suspended imprisonment order, and his participation in CEW played a big role in this outcome.
